UPDATE ON NOTIFICATION FOR PUBLIC SCHOOL CHOICE

With the close of the current school year quickly approaching, districts with Title I schools that did not make Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP) in 2003 must develop public school choice notification documents for parents. Potentially, there are an additional 29 districts that will have to offer public school choice in 2004-2005. Even though 2004 CSAP scores will not be available to districts until July, districts that did not make AYP in 2003 are required to have school choice notification document(s) prepared by May 15, 2004. The law requires that districts with schools identified for improvement (two consecutive years of failure to make AYP) must notify parents before the first day of school. Thus, plans for implementing public school choice should be in place well before this time.

Fortunately, there are many example letters available for districts to use as models, since 27 districts had to offer public school choice in 2003-2004. Example letters are available on the CDE website at: www.cde.state.co.us/cdeunified/tia_psc.htm, as well as additional information about requirements associated with public school choice.

Finally, the U.S. Department of Education recently released updated non-regulatory guidance on Public School Choice in which the department expounds on commonly asked questions. On page 2, there are a few of these new interpretations. Subsequent issues of The Buzz will discuss more of these.

Title I, Private Schools and Meaningful Consultation

The Non-Regulatory Guidance regarding Title I services to eligible private school children discusses in depth what is meant by "meaningful consultation".

Consultation with officials from private schools is an essential requirement of an LEA's implementation of an effective Title I program for eligible private school children, their teachers, and their families

Effective consultation provides a genuine opportunity for all parties to express their views and to have those views considered. Successful consultation establishes positive and productive working relationships that make planning easier and ensures that the Title I services provided meets the needs of eligible students.

Annually an LEA must contact officials of private schools that enroll children who reside in the LEA regardless of whether the private school they attend is located in the LEA. One way to accomplish this is for the LEA to convene a meeting of private school officials to explain the intent of Title I and the roles of the public and private school officials.

Consultation between the LEA and the private school officials must occur before the LEA makes any decision that affects the opportunity for eligible private school children, their teachers, and their families to participate in Title I programs.

An LEA must meet with appropriate private school officials throughout the implementation and assessment of Title I services. This consultation must include early discussions to prepare for the next school year so that there is a timely start of the Title I program at the beginning of each school year, and throughout its implementation and assessment of services.

- When both the option for public school choice and supplemental services exist, parents need to know that they can choose one of these. For schools on second year improvement, corrective action, or restructuring, LEAs must ensure that parents understand this choice, (i.e., by opting for public school choice, parents give up the option of supplemental services).
- An LEA must make choice available for students no later than the first day of the school year following the school year in which the LEA administered the assessments that resulted in the school being identified as in need of school improvement, corrective action, or restructuring [Section 1116(b)(1)(E)]. If possible, an LEA should notify parents about their available choices well before the beginning of the school year in which those choices will be available. Under no circumstances should an LEA wait until the next school year before providing the opportunity to transfer to eligible students. For example, an LEA that receives its list of schools identified for improvement in the fall might offer choice to students immediately or for the second semester [34 C.F.R. Section 200.32(f)].
- In addition, if an LEA has both schools in their first year of improvement and schools in their second year of improvement or undergoing corrective action or restructuring, it must give priority for supplemental educational services to students enrolled in the schools in their second year of improvement or in corrective action or restructuring (the students who, under the statute, are entitled to be given the opportunity to receive those services).
- The Title I statute requires that choice be made available to all students enrolled in schools identified for improvement (or corrective action or restructuring), but does not define “enrollment.” Therefore, it depends on how States and LEAs define that term and how they determine when a student is officially enrolled in a school. The Department believes, however, that students planning to enter a school for the first time, such as entering kindergartners, or students moving from elementary to middle school, or those who have just moved into the school attendance area served by a Title I school, should generally have the same opportunity to exercise choice as students previously enrolled in a school.
- In the case of specialty schools, such as schools for the performing arts, LEAs do not need to disregard entrance requirements when identifying transfer options for students. For example, an LEA may require students wishing to transfer to a fine arts magnet school or to a school for gifted students to meet the normal eligibility requirements for those schools, even if there are no other choices available to eligible students in the district.

Title I consultation with private school officials must, at a minimum, address the following issues:

- How will the LEA identify the needs of eligible private school children?
- What services will the LEA offer to eligible private school children?
- How and when will the LEA make decisions about the delivery of services?
- How, where, and by whom will services be provided to eligible private school children?
- How will the LEA assess the academic services to private school children, and how will the LEA use the results of that assessment to improve Title I services?
- The size and scope of the equitable services that the LEA will provide to eligible private school children and the proportion of its Title I funds that the LEA will allocate for these services.
- The method or the sources of data, that the LEA will use to determine the number of private school children from low-income families residing in participating public school attendance areas, including whether the LEA will extrapolate data if a survey is used.
- The services the LEA will provide to teachers and families of participating private school children.
- Discussion of service delivery mechanisms the LEA will use to provide service; and
- Thorough consideration and analysis of the views of the private school officials on whether the LEA should contract with a third-party provider.

Each LEA must maintain and provide CDE with a written affirmation, signed by officials of each private school with participating children or appropriate representatives of the private school officials, that the required consultation has occurred.

When an LEA has not obtained a written affirmation signed by private school officials, CDE will request that the LEA provide a reason for the lack of affirmation. In some cases, the reason may be that the private school officials did not want Title I services. However, if the reason is that there is a disagreement between the LEA and private school officials, CDE may facilitate resolution of their differences.

Regional Workshops

In addition to the Accountability Conference, CDE will be hosting Regional Workshops to instruct district personnel on the completion of the Consolidated Application. We realize that April and May are busy times in any school district however CDE strongly believes that the day long workshop will provide enough information to save district personnel time in the completion of the application and the approval process. Below are the dates and locations for the workshops. Feel free to attend any workshop whose location or date works with your schedule. Registration will be available online by mid-March.

When will we know our federal allocation for the 2004-2005 school year?

Preliminary allocations are established as soon as CDE receives the allocation tables from the Education Department (USDOE). This may happen as early as March, but sometimes these tables are based on the prior year counts, with the new year's funding. The final numbers were received by e-mail on April 30, 2003. These "final" numbers were revised twice by the Education Department after that date.

When does CDE declare allocations to be "final"?

CDE can not declare allocations to be final until we receive our actual grant award from USDOE. We should receive our grant awards in July, subject to change of course.

Will the USDOE numbers received need to be modified by CDE prior to release to districts?

Yes. The allocation tables received from the USDOE are recalculated by CDE to determine the required set-asides, hold harmless, administration, etc. that are provided for in the statutes. Therefore, the final allocations released to the districts by CDE will always be less than the USDOE numbers.

Are there any estimates available that districts can use for budget purposes?

Some of the general trends coming out of Washington for the 2004-2005 school year are for Title II and Title III to be level-funded and a fairly significant decrease in Title V funding. Remember, that funding under Titles II, III, and V are contingent upon finalizing the Title I allocations. The general trends for Title I are for level or slight decreases in the Basic and Concentration grant portions, and for some increases in the Targeted and Education Finance Incentive grant portions of Title I. Without the specific allocation tables from the USDOE, the Total Formula Counts, as well as the other data elements, we can not estimate the NCLB funding for individual districts.

What student data will be used for next year's allocations?

Last year USDOE used the estimated 1999 census data and other factors as determined by USDOE. At this time USDOE should use the 2000 census data, plus other factors as determined by USDOE, to do the allocations to the states for the 2004-2005 school year. Those data sources will probably alter some of the LEAs ability to qualify for funding, or qualify some LEAs that had not previously been qualified.
