ANNUAL REPORT

PROMOTING AVALANCHE SAFETY THROUGHOUT THE STATE OF COLORADO SINCE 1973.

LETTER FROM COLORADO AVALANCHE INFORMATION CENTER

The Colorado Avalanche Information Center (CAIC) is a program of the Colorado Department of Natural Resources (DNR). The program is a partnership between the DNR, the Colorado Department of Transportation (CDOT), and the Friends of the CAIC (FoCAIC), a 501c3 group. The mission of the CAIC is to provide avalanche information, education, and promote research for the protection of life, property and the enhancement of the state's economy. Colorado's avalanche safety program began in the United States Forest Service in 1973, as the Colorado Avalanche Warning Program, and moved to the Colorado Department of Natural Resources in 1983 where it continues to this day.

The 2018-2019 avalanche season was an amazing time to be in Colorado. The way the winter unfolded brought us an extended period with amazing conditions for winter recreation and we had front row seats for the most amazing avalanche cycle the state has seen in the last 100 years. The snow that fell in October and November changed into a very weak layer of depth hoar during a fairly dry December. Once it started snowing again we saw a very active cycle of human-triggered avalanches, releasing on this basal weak layer. The Center recorded 57 people caught in 42 avalanches by January of 2019 (34 people in January alone). Near the end of February the accumulated snowfall for the state blasted past the 30-year average and never looked back. Heavy snowfall in early March produced an extreme avalanche event beyond anything in recorded history in Colorado. The Center issued Extreme (Level 5) avalanche danger rating for four of our forecast zones and portions of US550 between Ouray and Silverton were closed for 18 days. Three people were killed, eight homes were damaged or destroyed, infrastructure delivering utilities was damaged in five counties, and Hinsdale County declared two separate states of emergency to address the avalanche cycle and the aftermath. The avalanches eventually stopped running through mature timber, but the snow continued and the snowpack in Colorado remained well above the long-term average until early June. During the 2018-2019 avalanche season the CAIC documented over 4200 avalanches, with 92 incidents where 135 people were caught and eight people were killed. We recorded 87 avalanches in the D4 and D5 levels of the Destructive Size scale (D1 through D5). In the previous 8 years we recorded a total of 24 avalanches in this size range.

This was an extremely challenging year to be working in avalanche safety in Colorado and I am very proud of the work done by the Center's staff. They worked very long hours for days, weeks, and eventually months in a row. They provided support to federal, state, and local government groups, public utilities, private companies, and people just trying to get through the mountains to get home or enjoy all of the snow. This year followed one of the driest years since 1970. Between changing weather patterns, increasing population, and a sky rocketing interest in winter recreation; the only thing we seem to be able to count on is that the opportunity to face a new challenge is just around the corner. I sincerely appreciate all of the support this program gets from the Department of Natural Resources, Department of Transportation, and everyone that contributes to the Friends of the CAIC. If the last year taught us anything it is that we are all working together to keep the mountainous areas of Colorado running and none of us can do it alone. I look forward to your continued support and to another year of working with you to keep the people in Colorado enjoying the snow and staying clear of avalanches.

Sincerely,

Ethan Greene
Director
Colorado Avalanche
Information Center

MISSION

The mission of the CAIC is to provide avalanche information, education and promote research for the protection of life, property and the enhancement of the state's economy.

MISSION

The mission of the Friends of CAIC is to support avalanche forecasting and education throughout the State of Colorado.

LETTER FROM FRIENDS OF CAIC

Dear Friends,

The 2018/2019 winter season was one for the record books here in Colorado. The historic avalanche cycle that took place in March 2019 was one that many of us may never see again in our lifetime. Watching the Colorado Avalanche Information Center (CAIC) team come together and work methodically and diligently to keep the public informed and in turn safe from the impacts of the cycle was incredible. I could not be more proud of the CAIC team.

The CAIC is largely funded by the State of Colorado, yet the program still relies heavily on donations to support its operations and education programs throughout Colorado. These donations fund avalanche forecaster positions, technology development, and the joint CAIC/Friends of CAIC Know Before You Go avalanche awareness program. Generous support from our donors also allows us to pursue special projects such as research around the March 2019 avalanche cycle, improved resources for avalanche investigations, and weather instrumentation throughout Colorado's mountains.

The Friends of CAIC is an integral voice in avalanche safety and education in Colorado. As we work to significantly increase our financial support to CAIC we encourage everyone – any individual, group, corporation, or business invested in public safety – to connect, learn, and donate to help us grow our collective impact on avalanche safety in Colorado. By uniting the vast network of backcountry users and partners, we can accomplish much more to drive avalanche safety forward.

Thank you for your past support and in advance for your continued support.

Sincerely,

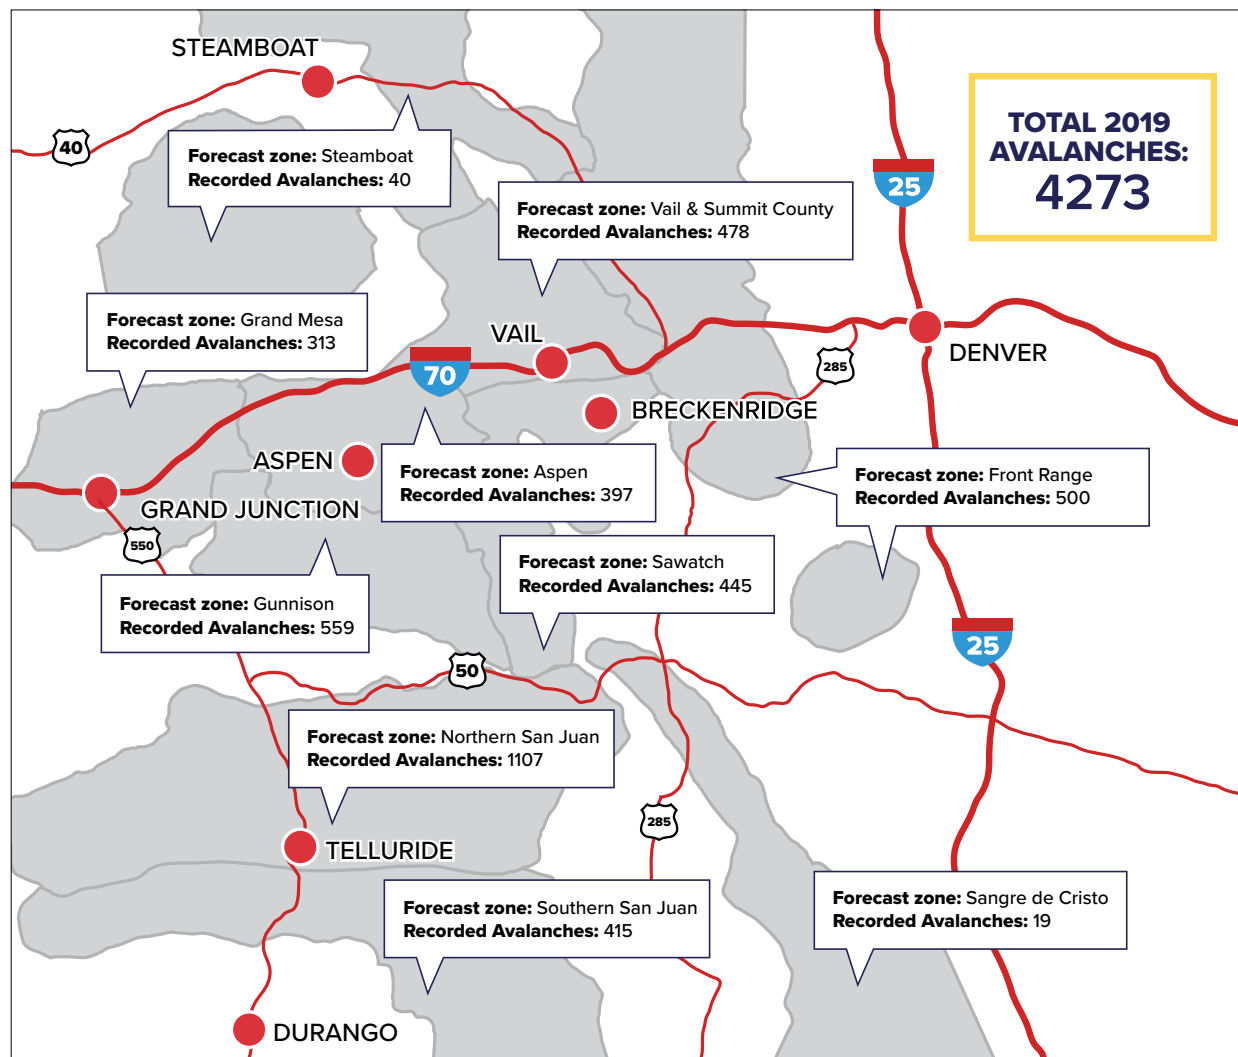

Aaron Carlson
Executive Director
Friends of CAIC

AVALANCHES & ACCIDENTS

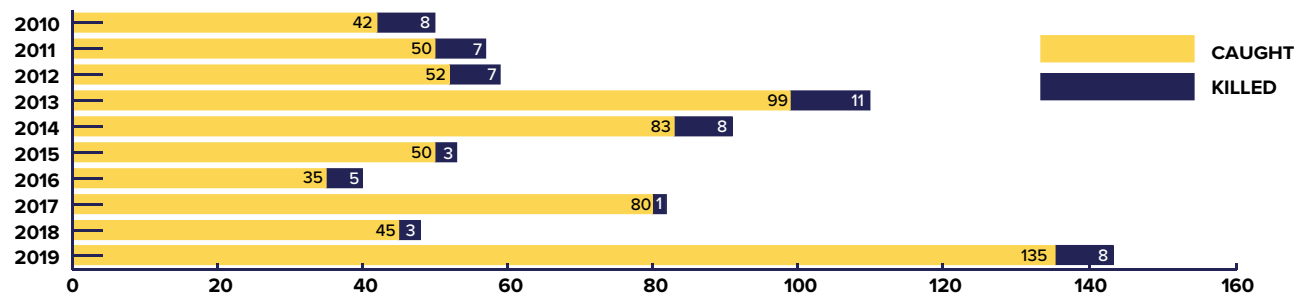

STATEWIDE SEASONAL SNOWFALL

The CAIC recorded information on 4273 avalanches, including 135 people caught. Of those caught, 8 were killed. The CAIC published 24 detailed accident reports.

SNOWFALL PATTERNS

STATEWIDE SEASONAL SNOWFALL

The 2018-2019 total seasonal snowfall was above the long-term average in most parts of the state. The season started early, with above average snowfall in October and early November. Many sites fell below their average in December, but tracked close to the long-term trend through January and February. Heavy snowfall at the end of February brought most sites far above average and they stayed that way through March, April, May, and even into June. Statewide, Colorado's snowpack at peak accumulation on April 5 was 133% of the 30-year median value.

LETTER FROM FRIENDS OF CAIC DONOR TRAVIS SPITZER

Climbing, mountaineering, and skiing have been a big part of my life since I was a kid. My first big mountain skiing trip and avalanche course were on Mount Sneffels during the winter of 1985/86; I was hooked! Getting out in the backcountry, away from the resort, is not only great exercise, but it brings climbing and skiing back to the soulful roots of our sport. It's just you, a friend or two and the freedom to explore.

However, the mountains are a dangerous environment. We understand the risks every time we tie-in or skin-up. It's what we love to do. The only way to mitigate these risks is to travel with the proper equipment, know how to use it and continually pursue the skills and knowledge base necessary to be as safe as possible. Resources like the Colorado Avalanche Information Center (CAIC) help build that base.

Education and awareness are key. The CAIC data is at your fingertips, however; knowing how to use it and continually develop your skills is paramount. I encourage everyone, especially the young chargers to become educated. Attend a Know Before You Go (KBYG) presentation, sign up for an avalanche course, or hire a professional mountain guide. We can always learn more and continue developing our knowledge base to be a better partner. We are relying on each other every time we go into the backcountry.

Over the years, our San Juan community and Colorado have lost some incredible souls; many of them dear friends. It hurts to think about it, and it has made me quite a bit more cautious than I used to be.

I have supported Friends of Colorado Avalanche Information Center (FoCAIC) over the years because it's important for our community to have access to the information and the educational outreach CAIC provides. These resources make our backcountry experience safer. It's not glamorous work to collect the data and then advise the public on the potential hazards and ever-changing conditions. But, it is important work and extremely valuable to our community.

If you love the data and outreach the CAIC provides as I do, it is important to give back. Although part of CAIC's budget comes from the Colorado Department of Transportation and the State of Colorado, FoCAIC is a key part of that budget. We all love to recreate in the backcountry. Help keep CAIC alive and well with your gift to FoCAIC. Give what you can!

CAIC FORECASTER HIGHLIGHT

REBECCA “BECS” HODGETTS

“OPPORTUNITY CAN BE MISSED BECAUSE IT IS DRESSED IN OVERALLS AND LOOKS LIKE HARD WORK.” - Thomas Edison

After a childhood spent mostly in the urban centers of New Zealand, I was exposed to the thrills of the great outdoors while attending Otago University in Dunedin. My career in the snow began after I graduated university and took a job as a lift operator at a ski area on Mt. Ruapehu, a volcano located on the North Island of New Zealand. Here I was fortunate to gain the mentorship of Heidi Godfrey, a pioneering female snowboarder, patroller, and mountain guide in New Zealand. Her enthusiasm for the snow and working in the outdoors added fuel to my fire, and there was no looking back.

While I burnished my credentials as a lift operator, I learned to ski, earned my medical certifications, and began my avalanche coursework through Canadian Avalanche Associations' professional program. I eventually convinced the ski area to hire me on the patrol squad and then give me access to the elusive “keys to cache” when I became an avalanche mitigation route leader. My fear of responding to trauma calls on the ski hill led me to volunteer for avalanche work at every opportunity as a more attractive alternative. I found a special comradeship in the avalanche group, and a way to spend the majority of the day outside. I eventually moved to Colorado, and finally found my tribe at Arapahoe Basin Ski Area, where I worked my way into an avalanche technician spot and eventually Assistant Ski Patrol Director.

While working at the Basin I met Colorado Avalanche Information Center (CAIC) highway forecaster Lee Metzger, who would become another pivotal mentor in my career. He and Ray Mumford introduced me to the life of a highway forecaster. Something about the challenge was alluring. When an opportunity to work with the CAIC as a backcountry forecaster presented itself, I took the leap. That season was a particularly deadly one with multiple avalanche involvements and multiple tragic fatalities. This triggered a lot of soul-searching and long talks with other forecasters discussing the darker side of our job. That same year, a workplace accident occurred involving the I-70 highway forecasting crew. As we all stepped up to help on the highway, I realized this role was a good fit for me. For once my timing was impeccable when a highway position opened up the following year, and I was offered the job. I truly enjoy working with the CDOT crews, Colorado State Patrol, and other stakeholders to manage this avalanche problem. One of the greatest breakthroughs for me as a forecaster was realizing the confidence I saw in other, more experienced, forecaster's eyes was actually just them becoming more comfortable with the uncertainty.

With change being the only constant, I thrive in the opportunity for growth working for the CAIC. Our leadership is continually innovating, and I often find myself hanging on for the ride, hoping I can wrap my brain around the next progression in the industry. During my tenure at the avalanche center, I've had the opportunity to become a lead forecaster, working more closely with an amazing group of dedicated avalanche professionals. I am honored to be a part of the team.
