Colorado Department of Public Safety
Division of Criminal Justice

Seasons Greetings!

Seasons Greetings! The staff at the Office for Victims' Programs at the Division of Criminal Justice wishes you joyous holiday celebrations and a happy New Year.

In this issue of Connections you will find the list of VOCA assistance awards for calendar year 2003. At this time, we are still uncertain about the possibility of a cut in these federal funds for the 2004 calendar year, and until Congress reconvenes in January, we are unlikely to know more. Like other state and local government agencies, and the many private non-profit agencies with which we do business, we are "tightening our belts" and anticipating a reduction in some of our resources.

This is the time of year that we look back on our accomplishments and anticipate the new year. In 2002, the Office for Victims Programs underwent a major staff transition period, with at least half of our staff assuming new positions, or leaving the unit. We also visited more than 50 agencies with projects receiving VOCA and/or VAWA grant funds, the most we have ever monitored in one year.

Happy Holidays from the OVP staff. As you can see, we're working hard for you.

Seasons Greetings

These visits made our respect for the work that you all do even deeper. In addition, we provided some important training and technical assistance on victim compensation statutes, policies and procedures, and expect to continue this training as needed in 2003. There were also an ever-increasing number of Victim Rights Act calls and complaints to which we responded. We did cut back on certain activities during staff transitions, especially Victim Rights Act training, attendance at some meetings and conferences, and local VALE standards site visits. But we expect to be back "out there" in the upcoming year. Our plans for 2003 include the review and potential revision of the standards for the operation of district Crime Victim Compensation and VALE programs. The standards were last revised in 1999, and need to be reviewed following a victim services audit conducted by the State Auditor's Office in 2001/2002. We expect to meet informally with various stakeholders before we initiate the formal rule-making process required by state law. Anyone with an interest in participating in this review may contact me at (303) 239-4437.

In the meantime, please accept the best wishes of all of us at the Office for Victims Programs for a happy and productive new year.

Compensation News You Can Use

By Peggy Gordon

The National Association of Crime Victim Compensation Boards held their National Training Conference in Denver this past October. It was the 25th anniversary of the National Association and it gave me an opportunity to reflect on some compensation "facts" that we don't talk or think much about. I want to take this opportunity to share a few of these tidbits with you; they may be interesting or even useful.

For example, did you know that:

- Colorado's population ranks 24th among all states, but we receive the 5th highest number of victim compensation claims in the nation.
- California was the first state to establish a victim compensation program in 1965.
- The National Association of Crime Victim Compensation Boards was established in 1977.
- Congressman Peter Rodino spoke at the first Association meeting in Washington D.C. He spoke about newly proposed legislation to create a federal Crime Victims Fund.
- Colorado's Compensation program began in 1982. The maximum award by statute was $1,500.
- In fiscal year 2001, California paid out $94,553,541. When Colorado is ranked among all the states, we have the 9th largest payout (almost $10 million in FY 2001). Seven years ago, in 1995, Colorado paid out $6.5 million.
- In fiscal year 2001, compensation programs nation-wide paid a record amount to crime victims—$375 million, 18% more than the prior year.
- In 1987, the 42 existing compensation programs spent about $140 million on behalf of victims.

- For the first time since the inception of VOCA funding, Congress has amended the statute to increase the basis for calculating VOCA grants for Compensation from 40% to 60% of state payouts. Congress also clarified that state compensation programs are payers of last resort in relationship to federal benefit programs (this is a constant issue and has become a significant problem for many state programs).

Here in Colorado, high dollar payouts, along with record numbers of compensation claims in many of the district programs, require local Boards to set caps on the amount of money they can pay out in any compensable category. This question of equity among districts comes up whenever I meet with groups to discuss Colorado's decentralized Crime Victim Compensation Program.

Each district is responsible for its own collections, as well as for what they pay out, and how much of a reserve they will maintain for new claims. Consequently, victims of crime in a particular district are affected by the resources available in that district. The same types of variations occur among states; for example, a victim in Washington State can apply for $150,000, and Iowa has no overall limit on a compensation claim. However, in my final analysis, the strengths of Colorado's decentralized system with its quick turnaround of its compensation claims and its high per capita rate for crime victims outweigh these perceived financial inequities between the districts.

Victim Safety Planning

Excerpt from “Promising Practices—Improving the Criminal Justice System’s Response to Violence Against Women” by the STOP Violence Against Women Grants Technical Assistance Project

Summary by Betsy Anderson – VAWA Program Administrator

Victim safety planning has become a critically important aspect of services for crime victims. The criminal justice system is often the first contact for victims of violence against women. Police, prosecutors, courts, and systems-based victim advocates have unique opportunities to help victims with safety planning, and to provide support and referrals to community resources. At every level of the criminal justice system as well as within victim services provider networks, personnel can help victims think through their safety issues and develop a plan to enhance safety and alleviate fear. Fortunately, many VAWA-funded projects in Colorado already have in place many of these recommended practices, while other projects continually seek to improve their procedures in this area. The following action plan is an identified “Promising Practice” by the STOP Violence Against Women Grants Technical Assistance Project and addresses how safety planning may be integrated throughout and beyond the criminal justice process.

9-Step Action Plan “at a glance”:

- 1. Assess current safety planning, support, and referral services.*
  - Consider whether services fully address the full range of victim safety needs.
  - Do not discount the need to conduct safety planning with domestic violence victims who continue to live with their offenders.
  - Educate personnel that sexual assault victims may need help with safety planning.
- 2. Integrate safety planning, support, and referral services into every contact with victims.*
  - Elicit input from advocates and survivors in developing safety planning materials.
  - Safety plans should incorporate strategies for a variety of circumstances, i.e. while the victim is at home, driving, at work, when being followed, when with family and friends, in public places, during an assault.
- 3. Develop tools to assist in safety planning.*
  - Obtain and adapt domestic violence safety planning forms from national or local resources.
  - Obtain stalking and sexual assault safety plan brochures from national or local resources.
  - Provide training and instructional materials to effectively implement the safety plans—Training must emphasize that victims cannot control their perpetrators.
- 4. Identify community partners who can provide safety planning and referral services.*
- 5. Conduct and utilize offender lethality and risk assessments.*
  - Obtain and utilize offender lethality and risk assessment instruments available locally.
  - Seek training on the effective use of these instruments.
- 6. Adopt law enforcement-initiated strategies to increase victim safety and well being.*
  - Use officer discretion to consistently arrest offenders upon finding probable cause.
  - Send a strong message to suspected or potential offenders even when no probable cause has been found.
  - Provide a link to community-based victim service programs.
  - Conduct thorough background investigations to provide information to prosecutors arguing for higher bail.
  - Continually re-assess offenders’ lethality.
  - Establish mechanisms to ensure heightened response to victims of repeat offenders and high-risk cases.
  - Direct law enforcement officers to confiscate weapons that could be used against the victim.
- 7. Adopt prosecutor-initiated strategies to increase victim safety and well-being.*
  - Use lethality assessments in charging, sentencing, and release decisions.
  - Request higher bail in felony cases, repeat offenses, or where otherwise appropriate.
  - Request a no-contact order at the arraignment or preliminary hearing.
  - Maintain long-term contact with victims.
  - Develop multidisciplinary units to address a variety of victim safety and justice needs.

Victims Rights Act Subcommittee Update

By Heidi Pomfret

The following is a summary of a recent allegation heard by the VRA Subcommittee. As always, names have been changed to protect confidentiality.

Case Summary

In the summer of 2000 John was the victim of domestic violence perpetrated against him by Ellen. Ellen was issued a Uniform Summons & Complaint and was subsequently charged with Harassment. John alleges that the District Attorney's Office failed to notify him of the filing of charges against the defendant, and did not afford him an opportunity to consult with the Deputy District Attorney assigned to the case prior to any disposition of the case. The charges against Ellen were ultimately dismissed, and a letter was sent to John in November of 2000 informing him of the dismissal.

Allegation by John

John alleged that the following right was violated:

C.R.S. § 24-4.1-302.5 (1)(b) The right to be informed of and present for all critical stages of the criminal justice process as specified in section 24-4.1-302(2);

The aforementioned right also includes the following procedure:

C.R.S. § 24-4.1-303(11)(a) The district attorney shall inform the victim of the following: The filing of charges against a person accused of committing any of the crimes specified in section 24-4.1-302(1) against the victim, including an explanation of the charges when necessary.

John stated that he did not receive information regarding the Harassment charge filed against Ellen until he received the aforementioned November letter notifying him of the dismissal of her case. He also related that he received a letter from the Victim/Witness Unit stating that advocates attempted to contact him at Ellen's old phone number in September. John stated that his own phone number was listed, and therefore, if the D.A.'s Office truly wanted to contact him, they could have done so.

Response by Victim/Witness Coordinator

The District Attorney's Office responded with the following summary of procedures that are followed by the Victim/Witness Unit to contact victims of violent crimes:

The Victim/Witness Unit tries to make initial contact with the alleged victim by contacting them at the address or phone number that is listed on the police report that are submitted to the District Attorney's Office. If the Victim/Witness Unit is unable to make phone contact with an alleged victim after several attempts or the number is disconnected, an advocate will send a contact letter to the address listed asking that the alleged victim contact the Victim/Witness Unit at the D.A.'s Office. Charging packets, which contain Victim Impact Statements, restitution forms and information about the upcoming court date, are also mailed out in each violent crime case.

There are times where victims move from the listed residence but have their mail forwarded by the post office. If the Victim/Witness Unit receives the contact letters or the charging packets back from the Post Office because the alleged victim is no longer residing at the address, they document it in their computer system and all mailings stop at that point. If an arrest is made, the Victim/Witness Unit attempts to contact the alleged victim within 1 or 2 days time, however, if a defendant is issued a summons it takes longer for the paperwork to reach their office.

The V/W Coordinator stated that in the case in which John was a victim, an advocate did attempt to contact him by phone when the Victim/Witness Unit received the case, but the phone was disconnected. A charging packet was sent, followed by a contact letter to the address listed for John on the police report. A month later, a letter was sent to John stating that the case against Ellen had been dismissed. (The letter regarding the dismissal was apparently the only letter that John received and had been sent to a different address than the initial letters.)

The District Attorney's Office provided the VRA Subcommittee with the police report from which they obtained information about John, documentation of the attempts to contact him, and actual contacts with him subsequent to the dismissal letter.

Victim Rights Act Subcommittee Findings

Based upon the information provided by the District Attorney's Office, the Subcommittee noted that the police report did, in fact, state that John was residing at Ellen's address at the time of the incident. The report listed his address and phone number as the same as that of Ellen. The report specifically stated that, "Ellen and John have been dating for approximately 3-4 months and were engaged to be married. John lives at this residence but has only been there about two weeks" (emphasis added). Although updated information regarding John's address may have been available as a result of a later incident resulting in charges being filed against him, the District Attorney's Office was not notified of John's new address. It is unknown as to how and when the District Attorney's files were updated to reflect the correct address.

The Subcommittee did not find a basis in fact for this allegation. They found that the District Attorney's Office met their statutory obligation by sending the information to the address that they had reasonable reliance to believe was the correct address for John. Additionally, the District Attorney's Office made an attempt to contact John at the telephone number that was listed for him in the police report. However, that telephone number was disconnected. They had reason to believe that John was residing at the address listed in the police report, and could be reached at the telephone number listed in said report.

Issues

This case illustrates the challenges faced by agencies who work together during the stages of the criminal justice process. The Victim/Witness Unit involved in this case received information from the police report. While the Victim/Witness Unit was attempting to contact John, he was arrested in a separate case, and updated information about how to contact him was apparently available through the new report. However, since the Victim/Witness Unit was attempting to assist John as a victim in the original case, and the Sheriff was in contact with him as a defendant in a new and separate case, there was not an automatic avenue by which the updated information would be shared. Unfortunately, victims, defendants, and the general public see the criminal justice system as one entity instantly able to access any and all information regarding all aspects of a criminal case. As such, it is difficult for people to understand and accept that District Attorneys, Law Enforcement, Probation, etc. are distinct and separate agencies typically housed in different offices and often with different technological capabilities and/or computer programs. While the VOICE system and other advances are beginning to allow for better sharing of information within the criminal justice system. The timely sharing of critical information across agencies remains an ongoing challenge.

Stump the Grant Geek...

By Tony Tilger

Dear Grant Geek:

I know the new Applications for VOCA will be coming due next Spring, and I want to make sure I am counting victims correctly when it comes to the estimated goals and objectives. I remember from a prior training that the number in the units of service provided on the bottom of the 2VOCA form cannot be greater than the number of victims served, but I can't remember why. Can you help?

Mathematically Challenged in Colorado

Dear Mathematically Challenged:

VOCA guidelines allow programs to count "units of service" only once per victim. Even if you provide follow-up to the same victim 15 times, you only count that "unit of service" once in the follow-up column of your 2VOCA. You may provide different services to the same victim, for example providing follow-up services and also providing victim compensation information, again counting each "unit of service" only once on the 2VOCA form. Therefore, if you report that you have served 103 victims in a particular quarter, the individual units of service on the 2VOCA cannot exceed 103. The ONLY time this is a little different is when there is a new grant period. If, for example, you are still serving a victim from your calendar year 2002 grant when your calendar year 2003 grant starts (January 1, 2003), you can count the victim you are still serving as a new victim, as well as document the units of service provided to them after January 1, 2003.

The Grant Geek

By the Numbers

By Karen Dechant

FY 2002 Victim Compensation federal grants began on October 1, 2002. Below is a schedule of the required reports and their due dates.

DCJ Form 10

The DCJ Form 10, Quarterly Activity Report, reports statistical and financial information by crime and service categories.

DCJ Form 11

The DCJ Form 11, Victim Compensation Financial Activity Report, contains information about each district's fund balance, state and federal expenditures, state and federal revenue, and encumbrances.

[Note: The DCJ 11 has been revised to reflect the legislative change to the Victim Compensation statute eliminating the annual reallocation calculations (C.R.S. 24-4.1-123). Other minor changes include a space for your email address and revisions to the federal grant expenditures (1st) section to better define the figures to be reported. Please use the new DCJ 11 beginning with the October-December 2002 quarter.]

The DCJ 10 and the DCJ 11 are submitted quarterly by each judicial district, whether or not that district is receiving federal grant funds. Reports are due at the end of the month that follows the last day of the quarter.

1st quarter	October–December	Reports due January 31
2nd quarter	January–March	Reports due April 30
3rd quarter	April–June	Reports due July 31
4th quarter	July–September	Reports due October 31

DCJ Form 6

The DCJ Form 6, Cash Request, is used by districts receiving federal grant funds to draw down those funds. Federal rules require that federal cash on hand be kept to a minimum. Programs may request funds for anticipated expenses no more than one month in advance or for reimbursement of actual program expenses. Submit two signed copies of the cash request to DCJ allowing at least 30 days for processing. Please submit the cash request form via mail. If an urgent situation exists and you must fax your cash request rather than mailing it, please do not mail originals as receipt of duplicate requests can delay processing.

If you have questions about these required reports, please contact me at (303) 239-4662 or Peggy at (303) 239-4493.

We hope you are enjoying these two columns dedicated to your grant questions. Karen Dechant addresses your financial questions in "By the Numbers" and Tony Tilger pits his brain-power against your programmatic questions in "Stump the Grant Geek!" Please submit questions to:
