REPORT OF THE
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

January 1, 1990

In April 1988, the Colorado Department of Revenue adopted the following mission statement:

"The mission of the Department of Revenue is to provide meaningful programs which emphasize excellence, maximize revenues, provide essential services to our customers, provide a healthy and challenging work environment for our employees and are accomplished in the most effective and productive way possible."

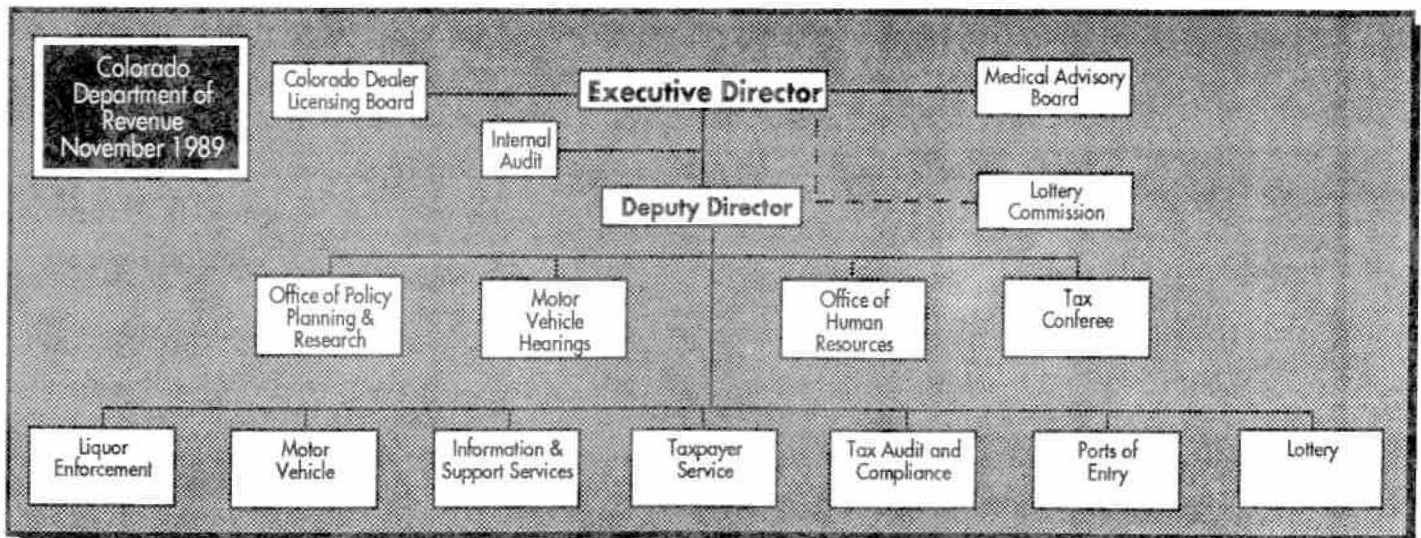

Our next challenge was to make that mission a reality throughout for the organization's 1,500 employees, as well as for our customers — the thousands of businesses and millions of individuals who come to the department for assistance in paying taxes, registering motor vehicles, obtaining licenses and purchasing lottery tickets.

The cornerstone of our efforts was our Two Year Plan, a strategic plan for improving operational efficiency that would enable the department to shift resources in order to fund innovations that improve customer service and make the department even more productive. With support from the Governor and the General Assembly, the Two Year Plan succeeded to the extent that the Commission on Government Productivity has recommended it as a model for other state agencies. The department's administrative cost savings over two fiscal years totalled $3.1 million. Portions of those savings were reinvested in innovations, such as Express Driver's License Offices, that are already having a positive impact on thousands of Colorado citizens' lives. The remainder of the savings was returned to the state.

Implementing the Two Year Plan required large commitments of employee time. Nonetheless, the department was able to fulfill all other statutorily and administratively assigned responsibilities. For that reason, I am pleased to present this forty-eighth annual report, which covers Department of Revenue operations for the period July 1, 1988 through June 30, 1989, to the Governor and General Assembly in accordance with C.R.S. 24-35-102(3).

Respectfully,

John J. Tipton
Executive Director
Colorado Department of Revenue

Executive Director John J. Tipton

"You're familiar with the stories about government employees. They work at the pace of an armadillo, assuming they work at all. They possess the manners of a New York cabbie and the creativity of a Bulgarian bureaucrat. Those are the stories, anyway. Now meet the 1,500 workers at the state Department of Revenue, the same agency that handles driver's licenses and liquor enforcement, not to mention collecting state taxes. For the past few months, this notoriously hidebound agency has been turning itself around."

"Here's Proof the Public Sector Can Innovate, Too,"
The Rocky Mountain
News,
December 18, 1988

In the spring of 1988, the Department of Revenue undertook an ambitious program of using private sector management principles to improve the department's operational efficiency and the quality of service delivery to the public. Productivity, accountability and innovation were key concepts that guided the program's development. Efficiency and effectiveness were the standards by which the program's success would be measured. The program was called the Two Year Plan.

"No more business as usual" was the rallying cry, as teams of Revenue employees took the following steps to implement the Two Year Plan:

Performance Measurement. A comprehensive process for measuring and evaluating every activity the department performs was developed in-house. The process sought not only to determine whether the department was "doing things right," but also whether it was "doing the right things."

Productivity Improvement. The performance measurement process, combined with other quality improvement efforts, was used to identify and implement productivity improvements on an ongoing basis.

Identification of Savings. The centerpiece of the Two Year Plan was the identification of cost savings of 2-1/2 percent during the 1988-89 and 1989-90 fiscal years — a total of 5 percent — within the department's existing budget. These savings would then be reinvested in innovations that further boost productivity and improve service to the state's citizens.

Investment in Innovations. With the support of the Governor and General Assembly the department was allowed to reinvest most of its savings to achieve significant improvements in productivity and service at no additional cost to the taxpaying public.

First-year results included the realization of $979,000 in administrative cost savings of which $875,400 was reinvested by the department and $103,600 was returned to the state.

"I am challenging this state government to reexamine how it uses public dollars — to be as frugal as it can be, to be as efficient as it can be, and to be as productive as it can be. . . The Revenue Department and its employees are doing an excellent job of incorporating this principle in their daily work,"

From Governor Roy Romer's
State of the State Address.
January 12, 1989.

Deputy Director Amelie Buchanan

INVESTING IN PRODUCTIVITY, SERVICE AND QUALITY

Members of the taxpaying public are both the shareholders and primary customers of government agencies. In both roles, their message in recent years is very clear — they want better not bigger government.

The private sector has long used the concept of improving operational efficiency to free up resources for reinvestment in innovations as a way to improve productivity and quality without increasing budgetary outlays. Applying the concept to public sector management, however, is something new. One of the largest impediments to improved efficiency in government is budgetary practice which historically placed state agencies in a "use it or lose it" situation with respect to their budget allocations. By working closely with the state legislature, the Department of Revenue was able to lift that barrier by entering into a Memorandum of Understanding that allowed the department to retain most of its efficiency savings to reinvest in innovations. In exchange for this budget flexibility, the department pledged a higher level of management accountability through continued use of productivity measurement systems.

All aspects of the Two Year Plan came together in a pilot project to restore the investigative and enforcement section of the Liquor Enforcement Division, which had been eliminated by budget cutbacks during the previous year.

Service: Need for the section's work was demonstrated by requests from local governments, law enforcement agencies, the alcoholic beverage industry and the public which relied on the state's program to maintain viable levels of voluntary compliance with and enforcement of the state's wine, beer and liquor codes.

Productivity: The 10-person section was restored by shifting $461,000 in savings obtained from efficiencies throughout the department to the Liquor Enforcement Division. The final piece of the strategy was the department's legislative proposal to finance continued operation of the section through cash funding, that is, fees paid by users and beneficiaries of the section's services. This would free the $461,000 savings for other uses in future years.

Quality: To ensure accountability for the quantity and quality of services delivered, as with all other units throughout the department, a set of key performance indicators was developed for the enforcement investigations. (See pg. 7)

Other reinvestments approved by the legislature for the 1988-89 fiscal year and paid for with the remaining $414,400 in savings retained by the department included:

- Express Driver's License Offices that enable customers who do not need to take written or drive tests to obtain faster service. (See pg. 5)
- Automated telephone systems that provide pre-recorded responses to routine requests for tax, driver's license and vehicle registration information and thus reduce waiting time for customers who need to talk to an operator.
- Computer Assisted Software Engineering (CASE) tools that create visual diagrams of computer system requirements that help programmers work with users to design better systems faster.

- Laptop computers, software and printers that improve work efficiency and quality in such diverse areas as fuel tax audits and issuance of driver's licenses.
- Facsimile machines, mobile phones and desktop copiers that speed up communications between Ports of Entry statewide and port headquarters offices to save valuable time for truckers.
- Other projects that boost employee productivity such as computerized power files that "read" bar codes to find documents, training programs and personal computers that automate functions previously performed manually.

The Department of Revenue's most highly visible reinvestment project was the opening of an Express Driver's License Office in Denver on July 5, 1988. Positive response to the pilot express operation from both the public and employees led to the development of a plan to replace Denver's antiquated full-service driver's license office with a metro-wide network of express offices complemented by test centers.

The express office offers fast renewals for drivers with seven points or less against their current licenses. The office also provides other services that do not require written or drive tests, such as Colorado identification cards, name and address changes, and voter registrations.

A department study found that 88 percent of its driver's license office customers need services that do not require a test. Express offices enable these customers to receive service without waiting in line with the 12 percent who do need to take tests.

Savings carried forward from the 1988-89 fiscal year are scheduled to be used to open five express offices and two test centers in the Denver-metro area during the 1989-90 fiscal year. An express office is also planned for Colorado Springs.

Demographic studies will be used to select express and test office sites that will be more convenient for the public than current full-service offices. Operating offices in shopping malls has created opportunities for providing service during evening and weekend hours.

TAX SIMPLIFICATION FOR TRUCKERS

Consistent with the department's commitment to customer service and operational efficiency is its continuing effort to promote tax simplification. The historic overhaul of the state's income tax laws in 1987 established a "flat tax" of 5 percent for individuals and reduced by more than half the number of lines on the Colorado individual income tax return forms. The 1988-89 fiscal year will be remembered as the year that brought about equally significant reform to the state's tax laws for the transportation industry.

Not only did the department implement the International Fuel Tax Agreement (IFTA), but it also worked with trucking industry representatives to support historic legislation that would replace Colorado's cumbersome gross ton mile (GTM) tax with registration fees.

IFTA enables Colorado-based truckers to file one fuel tax return and make one tax payment each period to the Department of Revenue for all fuel taxes owed to states that participate in the interstate fuel compact — a significant benefit to truckers. The department then apportions out and distributes the proper amount of tax to the other participating states.

During the legislative session, the department was also hammering out an alternative to the GTM tax. The tax is based on a complicated formula that involves vehicle weight, cargo weight and distance traveled in Colorado. Paperwork requirements for truckers were heavy and administrative costs for the state were high. Passage of Senate Bill 159, which takes effect on January 1, 1990, will eliminate the tax but maintain revenue neutrality through increased truck registration fees to be paid once a year. Projected annual administrative cost savings to the state are $700,000. (See "Legislative Digest," page 27.)

The department's Liquor Enforcement Division has primary responsibility for regulating Colorado's alcoholic beverage industry. This duty includes monitoring the activities of about 9,000 retail establishments. Elimination of the 10-person investigative and enforcement section in 1987 left Colorado for the first time since 1935 with no one at the state level to ensure compliance with state alcoholic beverage laws. The impact was felt most acutely by small towns and rural areas statewide.

On July 1, 1988, the newly reconstituted section — funded by Two Year Plan reinvestment dollars — commenced operations and by the end of the fiscal year exceeded its goals.

Specifically, the section performed more than 3,700 separate inspections of licensed retail establishments. Additionally, the section completed more than 1,200 investigations in response to complaints about possible violations of the alcoholic beverage laws. As a result, the section made almost 200 arrests and issued administrative charges for more than 200 separate violations.

The section also taught 145 instructional courses on alcoholic beverage laws to licensed retailers, local government officials, local law enforcement agencies and the public. Through these classes, almost 3,000 individuals received important information about the laws, enforcement activities and safety issues.

OTHER FISCAL YEAR ACCOMPLISHMENTS

- Implemented the first program — the sales tax math audit program — in what will be a comprehensive rewrite of the department's tax computer programs performed by the Revenue Accounting System team. The sales tax math audit program, for example, automatically issues bills to taxpayers whenever their tax payments are insufficient to cover the tax due based on a computation of the information supplied on sales tax returns. The cost of hiring an outside consultant to perform this system overhaul is estimated at in excess of $1 million, a cost being saved through the reinvestment of dollars in the Revenue Accounting Project.

“The Department of Revenue should be looked at as a model of how government can be made more productive.”

Senate President Ted Strickland speaking to the Colorado State Managers Association.

“We are always asking for innovative proposals. Now, for the first time, we have one before us and we need to be supportive in our response.”

Joint Budget Committee Vice Chairman Rep. Elwood Gillis.

- Adopted a new audit philosophy to achieve a well-balanced audit program that stresses overall taxpayer compliance rather than individual Revenue agent assessments. A new approach to audit selection removes the focus from auditing a few large businesses to auditing a representative mix of small and medium-sized businesses as well. Concurrently, developed a “Statement of Taxpayer Rights” consistent with legislation that allows the department to waive interest if a taxpayer owes money as a result of erroneous written information from a Revenue employee and establishes the same statute of limitations for assessments and refunds.

- Assessed $41 million through field audit activity, 140 percent of the goal of $29.3 million for this activity.
- Developed a Cost Accounting System for implementation during the 1989-90 fiscal year to support the Two Year Plan. The system will monitor the department's labor costs and other expenses according to organizational unit and Two Year Plan program category.
- Started Lotto on January 24, 1989, the sixth anniversary of the start of the Instant Game Lottery. Lotto earned $17 million during the first six months of operation. Overall Lottery earnings for the fiscal year were $80,594,766 of which $18,514,833 was returned for state projects.
- Increased the percentage of income tax refunds processed in 15 days or less from 45 percent to 78 percent.
- Reduced motor vehicle investigator appearances at court proceedings from 850 to less than 10 per month by support-

- Published a Colorado tax guide for high school and adult education teachers. More than 1,600 copies of the guide were distributed to 127 schools/districts.
- Began publishing a newsletter that is distributed to more than 1,000 city and county officials statewide.
- Rewrote the electronic funds transfer program, which reduced by 30 percent the city and county funds distribution time. State-collected local tax funds are now routinely deposited by the twelfth working day of the month.
- Assessed $17,049,759 in taxes, penalty and interest through Fair Share projects which are special reviews of tax and other documents to identify specific areas of non-compliance.
- Installed statewide, toll-free telephone number in the Motor Carrier Services Center and made other physical improvements to enhance “one-stop shopping” for truckers who need information about licensing, taxs and other applicable regulations.

- Established the department as a leader among state agencies in the area of affirmative action. The department exceeded its goal of hiring four persons with disabilities by hiring eleven disabled persons at all levels of the organization. The department continued to meet other affirmative action milestones aimed at eliminating underutilization of protected classes by 1992.
- Consolidated the department's data communications center with the state's General Government Computer Center (GGCC) in Lakewood, an operation which required moving revenue's mainframe computer and installing transmittal computer cable lines between the department and GGCC.

“On a preliminary basis, the Commission is considering using the Department of Revenue’s Two Year Plan as a model for other departments of State government. The plan approach is sound, well thought out and should provide the State with on-going productivity improvements.”

The sales and use tax rate is 3.0 percent.

Sales tax is levied on the purchase price paid or charged upon all sales and purchases of tangible personal property at retail. Wholesale vendors of tangible personal property file annual returns. Vendors are allowed a discount of 3¹/₃ percent of the tax due to cover expense in collecting and remitting the tax on a timely filed return.

The tourism promotion tax rate is 0.2 percent.

Taxable items include lodging services, certain food and drink sales, ski lift and admission tickets, private tourist attraction admissions, rental automobiles, and tour bus and sightseeing carrier tickets.
